Miss Zoe Martin has returned to her home, "Falls Farm," Chesterfield county, after visiting relatives in Waverly, N. Y.

Miss Annie Louise Reinhardt has returned to her home, 12 East Grace Street, after summing in the North.

Overton C. Luford, of Washington, is in the city. Mr. Luford is pleasantly remembered in Richmond, having been connected with the railway mail service here.

Miss Myrtle S. Redford is at home, 307 East Main Street, having spent the summer in Albemarle county.

Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Satterwhite and family are in the city.

CHURCH A VALLEY BEACON

LEXINGTON, VA., September 5.—Important factors in shaping the destinies of the Upper Valley of Virginia beyond question have been the old Presbyterian churches founded by the original settlers and sustained in large measure by their descendants. One of the oldest and most notable of these is New Providence, situated midway between Staunton and Lexington, the story of which not only reveals the ancient life of its own section, but throws light on the existence of many an institution throughout the nation.

One might well begin its story in Scotland in the days of the Dissenters, but for this chapter it may start in Virginia with events leading up to the capture of a certain buffalo calf which, in the hands of a politic financier, served such a purpose as did Sir Walter's cloak.

In the spring of 1736, John Lewis, pioneer settler of Augusta county, returned to Williamsburg, bringing with him as a visitor to his home and a faithful home beyond the mountains a man by the name of Burden. If Burden's eye was delighted with the rare of the Valley, his mind was busy with schemes for turning its fertility to his own advantage. The buffalo calf came to his assistance by being so good as to be captured alive, and Burden, seeing his opportunity, carefully carried that calf to Williamsburg and, with proper ceremony, presented it to Governor William Gooch, who, "thus propitiated," made to him a grant of 100,000 acres of land.

Early Scotch-Irish Settlers. That grant, however, carried with it the important condition that within ten years 100 families be settled upon it, and Burden, to find a hundred families willing to be buried in his beautiful wilderness, advertised it throughout the colonies of Ireland and Scotland at 25 cents an acre. Thus it happened that the country was settled line on his own account. At present Captain Mills is a consulting plumber, at the same time being the president of the Virginia Equipment and Supply Company, Inc. In his early life he acquired a taste for military work, having finally risen to the captaincy of one of the companies in the old First Virginia Regiment. He voluntarily retired from the service a number of years ago.

Captain Mills is a man of good address, being one of the most fluent speakers in either branch of the Council.

son, Russell; Mr. and Mrs. Duckhardt and daughter, Hilda; Mrs. Cecil Long and Misses Annie Long, Hester Blunt, Gracie Hitt and Ann Drever have returned after a delightful stay at the Haynes Cottage at Virginia Beach.

Mrs. John Fraser and son, John, of 2408 West Main Street, are visiting friends in Pittsburg, Pa.

Master Fred P. Hirschberg, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hirschberg, was confirmed on Saturday morning at the Synagogue Keneseth Israel, at 10 o'clock.
